What music and which book are you currently into?

I like to listen to music from the 80s while I'm working, just to have a little background noise. At the moment I'm reading American Sniper by Chris Kyle, the memorial edition

What is your silliest mistake?

Not wearing my face mask, just ask my wife. Shaving your beard to see if you need stitches in your lip is enough to never forget again

What has been your greatest challenge?

Trying to make something more challenging than my last piece. When you have a limited size to work with and you're trying to put as much as you can in it, without making it look like you just glued something together. When I see a masterpiece segmented bowl, I try even harder to push myself to take it to the next level

Name one thing on your turning 'to do' list?

I want to see how many rolling pins I can make before running out of ideas. If I keep making it a challenge, it will only make me a better turner, plus I want to show people not only can you make a pie crust, you can also use a piece of art to do it

Tell us about the piece you are currently working on...

At the moment I have several projects on the go from designing another piece of outdoor furniture to go with my Wounded Warriors chairs, benches and swings to designing a rolling pin with a yellow ribbon going through it

What is the one piece of equipment or tool you would not be without and why?

I think like most woodworkers the tablesaw is the heart of my 'shop. I'm sure that's why it's always placed in the centre of the 'shop. For me it all starts there, plus it works great for cutting up any mistakes for a nice little campfire with my wife

If you could change one thing what would it be and why?

One thing I would like to change is the distance to the lumber store. If I want any kind of exotic or hardwood I have to drive 434 miles round trip to get what I need

What is your favourite type of turning?

I love turning exotic woods, it's so different than what I'm used to and the colours can be amazing. Bringing the colours together to make the piece flow from one end to the other, no matter what you're turning at the time

If you had one wish, what would you wish for?

One thing I wish I had was a bigger 'shop. Having to move everything around just to make enough room to work gets a little frustrating after a while, but I'm also thankful to at least have a 'shop to work in

If you could have one piece of equipment, what would it be and why?

A new bandsaw. I have been looking at a new Laguna and it's the next tool I would like to purchase. I keep telling my wife, I already know how many rolling pins I have to sell to pay for it ●
